

Process that occurs naturally without human interference

Examples: dogs, livestock, or crops

Traits are inherited from parents

Example: Colors of the peppered moth or finch beaks.

Results in change in genetic traits of a species

Change occurs over many generations

Traits acquired increase the species chance for survival

Acquired traits do not always enhance the survival of the species

Desired traits are selected by humans

“Survival of the Fittest”