

Corn Cob Toys

Objective

Students will make toys from corn cobs. Students will write descriptions for making the toys and will write plays with the toys as characters.

Background

In Early America, there was no industry devoted to making toys for children. Most families were involved in farming, and children stayed busy with chores. When they had time to play, they had to find amusement from everyday life. Made toys consisted of whatever they or their parents could make for them from whatever they had around the home. Toys were usually simple in design, and the material available to work with depended on the geographic location and the wealth and talents of the child's family.

One major crop grown by Early American farm families was corn. The Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock would have starved in 1621 if natives had not taught them how to grow corn. Besides eating the corn and feeding it to their animals, the Pilgrims also learned to stuff their mattresses with corn husks and to burn corn cobs for fuel. From the cobs and the husks they learned to make toys.

Today, we have many more uses for corn. Corn syrup sweetens candy bars and many of the sweet drinks we enjoy. Corn is even used to make the plastic used in modern toys.

Visual Art

1. Tell students they are going to learn to make toys from corn cobs, like children in early America did.

— Show students how to make corn cob people and corn cob airplanes, as described below.

— Students will make one of the two toys described or design and make some other toy or useful object from the materials provided.

CORN COB PEOPLE

— Students will use markers to draw faces on the large ends of their corn cobs.

— Students will choose fabric remnants to wrap around the cob and tie the cloth in place with yarn.

— If corn silk is available, students may use it to make hair for their dolls. The hair may be tied, wrapped in loose strands or braided. If no silk is available, have students draw hair or glue on yarn.

CORN COB AIRPLANES

— Students will decorate the planes with markers, as desired, before criss crossing two corn cobs and securing them with yarn.

2. Students will use fresh corn on the cob to make corn paintings, as

Vocabulary

cob—the woody core on which the kernels of Indian corn are arranged corn—the seeds of a cereal plant and especially of the important cereal crop of Indian corn, also called maize husk—a usually thin dry outer covering of various seeds or fruits (as barley and corn) kernel—a whole grain or seed of a cereal (as wheat or corn) toy—something for a child to play with

—Cover a table with newspaper, and place paper on top.

—Students will dip corn on the cob in tempera paint, roller-style, and roll along the paper in any direction.

Social Studies

1. Read and discuss background and vocabulary.
 - Discuss the toys of the past compared with toys of the present
 - Compare and contrast corncob dolls with modern dolls and corncob planes with modern model planes.
2. Students will use online or library resources to find pictures of toys from other cultures around the world.
 - Students will compare American toys with the toys from other cultures.
3. Discuss what holiday we celebrate in the US as a result of the Pilgrims' struggles. Discuss family traditions for the holiday celebration.

English Language Arts

1. Students will each write a description of the toy/object he or she has made and provide instructions for making it.
2. Students will write and perform plays, using their corn cob people as characters.
3. Students will complete the worksheet provided with this lesson.
4. With a combination of drawing and writing, students will create toys they believe will be invented in the future.
 - Students will write opinion pieces explaining why they believe their newly-invented toys are better than toys from the past or present.

Math

1. Students will estimate the number of kernels on a corncob.
2. Students will develop strategies to find the number of kernels on a corncob using multiplication.
3. Students will estimate the length of a corncob.
4. Students will order corncobs by length.
5. Students will measure corncobs to find the circumference and length of each corncob.
6. Students will compare measurements to determine the differences between different corncobs.
